Our Dead at Andersonville.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, August 24th.—As a [illegible] commentary on the trial of the Andersonville prison-keeper now taking place in this city, Capt. James M. Moore, Assistant Quartermaster, and party to-day returned from Andersonville, where they have been engaged for the past month in identifying the graves and giving honored sepulture to the fourteen thousand victims of rebel barbarity who suffered all manner of torture and death in that notorious prison pen. Captain Moore and party, consisting of clerks, painters, letterers, carpenters, etc., to the number of forty-two, including Miss Clara Barton, left here on the 8th of July, and proceeded to Andersonville by way of Savannah, up the river by steamer to Augusta, thence by rail to Atlanta, Macon and Andersonville.

The railroad between Augusta and Atlanta is the only one of the routes destroyed by Sherman in his march across Georgia, that is yet in operation. The Georgia Central road from Savannah to Macon is yet a wreck in many places, and will not be repaired for months to come. At Macon, General Wilson, who took a deep interest in Capt. Moore's work, detailed a small force to assist him, and on the 26th of July the party began their labors. The dead were found buried in trenches on a site selected by the rebels about three hundred yards from the stockade. The trenches were from three to four feet deep, and in a clayey soil. It is rather remarkable that it is the only clay soil in that vicinity, and it is, therefore, inferred that the rebels selected it to prevent the exhumation of bodies by the action of the elements, thereby adding to the miasma of the vicinity, which the people for miles around in that section loudly complained of.

By means of a stake at the head of each grave, which bore a number corresponding with a similar numbered name upon the Andersonville Hospital records, most fortunately captured by Gen. Wilson last spring, Capt. Moore rejoices to say that he was enabled to identify, mark and honor the graves of thirteen thousand of the dead. To all but 400 of those buried in that vast cemetery, a neat tablet, about two feet high, painted white, and lettered in black with the number, name, company and regiment of each, was placed at the head of each grave.

Nearly eighty thousand feet of pine lumber were used in those tablets alone. The cemetery has been divided by one main avenue running through the center, and subdivided into blocks and sections in such a manner that with the aid of the number a visitor can go to any particular grave without difficulty. A force of men is now engaged in laying out walks, clearing the cemetery of stumps, stones, &c., and will this fall beautify by setting out trees, &c. A neat board fence encloses the entire area, about fifty acres, and a flagstaff in the center, with colors at half mast, marks the honored "city of the dead." In a circle on a large board over the gate are the words, "National Cemetery, Andersonville." In the grounds at various places Capt. Moore caused appropriate inscriptions to be placed, and endeavored, as far as his facilities would permit, to do whatever was possible to transform the wild, unmarked, unhonored graveyard into a fit place of entombment for the nation's gallant dead. Capt. Moore found the prison pen in a perfect state of preservation, just as the rebels left it; buildings, stockade and ground huts, and the veritable dead line as palpable as ever. That the controversy about the existence of this line may be settled, Capt. Moore brought a piece of it away with him. One of the first things Gen. Wilson did after the capture of Macon was to send a force to Andersonville, take possession of and preserve everything about the place. Nothing has been destroyed, and as our exhausted, emaciated and enfeebled soldiers left it, so it stands to-day, a monument to an inhumanity unparalleled in the annals of war. Andersonville itself consists of but one solitary house, aside from the buildings erected for their use.

The people who live in that locality assert that it is notorious for its unhealthiness, that it is known to be the most unhealthy part of Georgia. Malarious fevers constantly prevail, and one of Captain Moore's party, a young man named Edward Watts, fell a victim to typhoid fever just before the party left. Two soldiers of the force, detailed by General Wilson, also died, and one was murdered by a guerrilla. At a station named Montezuma, just outside the stockade, stands pine timber enough to build hundreds of miles of log huts, had our prisoners been allowed to use it. Near the inclosure is also the veritable dog kennels where were kept the leash of bloodhounds whom the rebel Colonel Gibbs to-day testified, in the Wirz trial, were regularly mustered into the service, received regular rations, and were used for recapturing escaped fugitives. While Capt. Moore and party were engaged in their work they were obliged to camp out in regular army style, the accommodations of Andersonville consisting of but one house. The people of that vicinity are a lazy, sallow faced, haggard, ignorant class. Their ignorance was especially astonishing. One man was found who had not heard of President Lincoln's death, and another who refused greenbacks because his government would not allow him to take those things. He absolutely did not know that the Southern Confederacy had gone up. At present Andersonville is guarded by a small force from Macon. A superintendent of the grounds and buildings was appointed by Capt. Moore, and everything pertaining to the place will be carefully preserved. A list of the dead was brought back, and as soon as it can be prepared it will probably be published. It will be a vast and solemn "Roll of Honor." Miss Clara Barton, who accompanied the party, has also returned. She took a deep interest in the noble work, submitted cheerfully to all the sacrifices and privations, and rendered very efficient aid. The entire party deserve the thanks of the country for their services.

"HIGH TONE" AT THE SOUTH.—The Fayetteville (N. C.) News, in urging the Southern people to cease their bickerings among themselves, holds this language, which sounds as if the "proud and haughty Southerners" still had an existence:

"Now if we of the South, in all our habits, are different people from those of the North, and while the questions of our political association and commercial intercourse with them have been settled, and while we are forced to accept the one by the arbitrament of the sword, and the other as a natural consequence to the first—there is no reason why we should cease to treasure those teachings which our ancestry, bred in refinement, and possessed of high notions of honor and chivalry, have handed down to us in sacred trust. There is no reason why we should forget that the blood which courses in Southern veins comes down from cavalier forefathers, who despised the roundhead puritans of England with as mighty a contempt as we have felt for their descendants. There is no reason why we should not unite in the common work of keeping alive the splendid social system which we inherit from them, nor why we should cease to turn with pride to their fame, recalling all their noble traits of character, and determine that we too will treasure those teachings which they left us and emulate the pure examples they gave."

THE NATIONAL DEBT.—The official statement of the national debt to August 1st shows that it then amounted to $[illegible] 253,275, which is less by nearly $300,000,000 than was generally supposed. It has been roughly estimated at $3,000,000,000, while many believed it would be even more than that. There is $110,440,030 cash in the treasury, making the balance of debt over cash $2,646,[illegible]. It appears from official data that the receipts for the quarter ending with March were $20,[illegible]; internal revenue, $6[illegible]2,000; sales of public lands, $16,000; direct taxation, $52,700; miscellaneous, $1[illegible]. Total in round numbers, exclusive of loans, $[illegible]26,000,000. Total expenditures for same time, $[illegible].

Mr. Burlingame, the American Minister, brought an interesting gift from China to Mr. Longfellow. It seems that Mr. Wade, attaché of the British Embassy at Pekin, with some skillful Chinese scholar, made a close translation of Longfellow's "Psalm of Life," which was then wrought in the manner of the country [illegible] on the [illegible] posts of his house. There the calm, pure wisdom and [illegible] of its sentiments greatly impressed a learned dignitary [illegible] part of the Empire, who thereupon put it into pure Chinese poetical form [illegible] the last polish, and so writing it out with his own hand on a beautiful fan, sent it as a present to the poet, by the hand of Mr. Burlingame, at Cambridge. It is pleasant for all the admirers of that charming poem to know that thousands of Pekin folks stop to read, and admire it, too, as they pass Mr. Wade's door.

A seaman rather badly equipped applied to an officer of one of our gunboats, to be entered on the ship's books. The lieutenant, observing his ragged appearance, remarked, carelessly, that he would not do. "I hope," replied Jack, "that your honor will not condemn the hull on account of the rigging." The reply excited the attention of the officer, who sent the weather-beaten tar below for a good meal and new clothing. He proved one of the best seamen in the ship.

A FORLORN CHANCE FOR POOR RELATIONS.—Let those rich men and women of the community, who now have the terrible bugbear—confiscation—hanging like a dark cloud over them, remember their poor relations, or any one else they may choose, who is poor. They have an opportunity of saving their lands and property from confiscation, by giving away all above $20,000. Here is a rare chance for the exercise of liberality and charity. "We'll bet ten dollars down," as the song says, that not one in one hundred of the rich men will remember their poor friends if there remains one chance in a million that they will escape the bugbear. Mark our words, ye "poor relations," and consider your chances forlorn.—Petersburg Express.

THE ROAD WELL WATCHED.—The Hudson River Railroad, one hundred and fifty miles in length, employs two hundred and twenty-five "flagmen," stationed at intervals along the whole length of the line. Just before a train is going to pass each one walks over his "beat," and looks to see that every track and tie, every tunnel, switch, rail, clamp and rivet is in good order, and free from obstruction. If so, he takes his stand with a white flag and waves it to the approaching train to "come on"—and come on it does at full speed. If there is anything wrong, he waves a red flag, or at night a red lamp, and the engineer, on seeing it, promptly shuts off the steam and sounds the whistle to "put down the brakes."

It may not be generally known that immediately after the attack upon and capture of Fort Donelson by General Grant he was placed under arrest; yet such is the fact. General Grant was never informed of the charges made against him, for his discharge was ordered without trial or Court of Inquiry, but he did ascertain who ordered the arrest. It was done by order of General George B. McClellan. The latter subsequently wrote several cordial letters to the man whose daring and [illegible] had astonished and alarmed him.

[illegible] PAPER OF THE STATE

SATURDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 7, 1865

A Valley Railroad

The rapid influx of population to our State admonishes us to bestir [illegible] as soon as to arrange matters that the influx of population will be a positive blessing to us. That we have the [illegible] and an abundance of natural resources to justify a population equal to that of any State in the Union no one will deny. But that we have the necessary means and appliances at hand by which this influx of population can be made to conduce largely to our benefit is something that we cannot at present boast of, and which can only be accomplished by enterprising capitalists.

A railroad stretching through the valley of the Willamette and the Umpqua, is what is needed to make Oregon a great State. It is a speedy and cheap mode of transit that Oregon requires before she can place herself in a position to demand attention from the commercial world at large. A railroad on the route we have described would be the desideratum of Oregon which is absolutely necessary before we can expect to see our wharves studded with ships from every Nation. It is a well known fact that cereals in the upper portion of the valley are worthless in a commercial point of view wherever prices range below one dollar a bushel, and it is often the reason that there is no mode of conveyance by which they can be taken to the commercial Metropolis, with any margin for the produce. So with every other article of produce, stock, &c.

That a railroad would remedy this cannot be denied. The only question is will a railroad pay? We say it will! Heretofore there has been a prejudice existing among railroad men against narrow guage roads, on the ground that they were unsafe, but this has been put to the test by English engineers, who have lately constructed a road on that principle and the result proves that a road can be built that will be perfectly safe and fully adequate to the wants of any agricultural community. What the cost of such a road in Oregon would be, we cannot say as we have no data at hand by which to judge, but one thing is certain, in the Willamette Valley a road can be built with as little expense as in any State of the Union, and we hope the time is not far distant when steps will be taken to accomplish this most desirable and necessary object.

The present is the first season that steamboats have made regular trips up the Willamette river until this late in the year. This is mainly owing to the fact that two lines have been in competition for the trade and travel, but with all the advantages of navigation there is a large scope of country that cannot reap the benefits to be derived from commerce without a railroad. The State Fair which has just closed at Salem, brought together representatives from nearly every section of the State, and their sympathies all seem to favor the great and important work. The farmer, the merchant, the mechanic, every one who holds an interest in the welfare and prosperity of the State, with whom we have been enabled to converse during the week, favor the prospect, and we have no hesitancy in saying that were books opened for the subscription of stock in a narrow guage road from Portland to the southern line of the Umpqua valley, success would be insured to the enterprise.

The interest taken in the Agricultural Society by the farmers of the valley generally, shows a determination on their part to bring the State up to that position which she is deserving, and so far as they are enabled to do, it will not be long before the time arrives. But a system of internal improvement is an actual necessity, in order that the agricultural, manufacturing and commercial relations may keep pace with one another. On the score of stock raising and grain growing, Oregon has established an enviable reputation by the exhibit of the week past. Now in order to give permanence to these branches of industry, the capitalist has an opportunity to invest in an enterprise which promises him an abundant return. This valley is capable of producing much more than the whole State of California produces for export. Farmers can raise grain just as cheaply, but ships do not come here for it, and why? Simply because it costs more money to lay the grain down on the dock for transportation to a foreign port than the original cost of raising, harvesting and preparing it for market.—These matters are worthy of consideration, and it is certain that the object accomplished, ships, laden with the commerce of the world will flock to our harbors, and in return take from us our productions.

THE MAILS.—There is still no assurance that the Oregon and California overland mail service will be resumed. On the contrary, the stock and coaches of the company will very likely be taken from the service they are now employed in by the 15th inst., when the people of this valley shall [illegible] in blissful ignorance of things on the out side. They are now partially supplied through the [illegible] of Wells, Fargo & Co's Express, but of course when the stages stop, their express stops also. Passing over the route between this city and Salem, one cannot fail to read the anxiety pictured in the countenances of Postmasters whose occupation is gone, at small stations, and whose neighborhood is deprived of the benefits of mail communication. Postmaster Davis of this city has taken every possible means of forwarding the mails received by steamer to all points up the Willamette river. He has even gone to Canemah to be sure that the mails would go on to Salem, Albany and places touched at by boat, yet we see it stated that tons of mail matter is allowed to lodge at the Portland office after coming to Oregon by steamship. This is incorrect, and unjust. Mr Davis has taken some trouble to accommodate the people, and he merits the opposite of blame from all parties. We hope something may yet intervene to prevent the utter loss of this service to the people of the State. We have always felt that this would be so—but it seems almost too late for hope. The Statesman, after opposing the letting of the mail contract to a company of Californians," and endeavoring to excite prejudice against the course pursued by this paper in regard to the matter of a discontinuance of the service very wisely changes its base and says: "There is but one course—that is, to give the contract to the California Stage Company at their bid." But the probability is now that course will not be pursued, and we may be obliged to get along without mails.

THE HUDSON'S BAY AND PUGET SOUND AGRICULTURAL COMPANIES CLAIMS.—We give place elsewhere to a letter from Hon W. C. Johnson on the above subject. We trust he may be enabled to obtain authority to produce witnesses in behalf of the United States in the examinations concerning the final settlement of the claims of those Companies. The claim to the Cowlitz farm set up by the Puget Sound Agricultural Society amounts to $126 551 [illegible]. We have been informed that the Company once offered the farm for seventy five dollars, and such little discrepancies certainly require examination.

PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR.—Governor Gibbs has decided upon convening the State Legislature, and his proclamation to the effect that members meet at Salem on Tuesday the 5th day of December next, appears in another column.

Letter From Eagle District

EAGLE CITY, Sept 27, 186[illegible]

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

'Twas an ancient adage that no good could come out of Nazareth, but subsequent events proved the promise to be utterly false, and in a like manner will the character of this district be redeemed in spite of the curses and anathemas heaped upon it by the many monomaniacs who paid it an early visit last spring, and invested a short spasmodic effort for a raise which to their own discomfiture, proved a non success. A year ago from this time some flattering accounts of the mineral worth and resources of this district found their way before the public, but were unreliable, because based upon supposition and imagination, instead of practical demonstration. We detest and denounce those who would delude the public by false statements, and subject the more excitable to loss and inconvenience, and pledge ourselves to make no statements not in harmony with existing facts. We have seen hundreds of specimens of the rock on which the future prospects of our country depends subjected to the mortar and crucible, and invariably with the most favorable results. A fact which merits the attention of every philanthropist and sympathizer with human sufferers.

FIFTH ANNUAL STATE FAIR.

[FROM OUR OWN REPORTER.]

SALEM, October, 4, 1865.

Second Day.

At twelve o'clock, entries were closed, and arrangements having been perfected for the exhibition and examination of stock and articles, the Fair proceeded in a practical manner. President Eddy delivered his opening address at 1 o'clock, in the grove adjoining the Pavilion. He paid a handsome tribute to the people surrounding him, who have so triumphed over natural barriers to the march of agricultural pursuits in the new but noble State. He occupied but little time, as the annual address would be delivered on Friday by Rev. H. K. Hines. The position and importance of Oregon now was contrasted with the position but a few years ago, showing that in proportion to her population she was second to no State in the Union, in the great and paramount interests of tilling the soil, and in unfolding to the world the vast treasures of the mountain ranges, in the improvement of her manufacturing resources, in the development of all the varied paths of industry her course is onward. The ladies received a high compliment for the specimens of work which they have contributed to the exhibition, and which constitutes by no means the smallest incentive to those gatherings. The skill and industry from their hands was characterized as being the greatest criterion of civilization and refinement in the country, and must be considered not the least to make us proud of Oregon. The propriety of taking premiums in plate instead of coin was discussed, it being of vital interest to the Society, and from the fact that every member of a family in the State would be better pleased in the exhibition of such premiums than to remember receiving so many dollars in coin. Such premiums would remain a stimulant in the family, an ornament in the house, and if wisely selected be useful. If properly commenced, the President held that this feature could not fail to increase in popularity and interest. He concluded by stating that the Society was entirely in the hands of the farmers and mechanics of the State, and with the hope that its future would be liberally sustained, informed his hearers that the 5th annual exhibition was now open for inspection. The address of the President will be published in connection with the final report of the Society, hence, as I am admonished to be brief, I shall at this time make no further mention on the subject.

The various classes were nearly all well filled at the time of closing the books in the Secretary's office, and the exhibition began with a parade of horses, cattle, jacks, mules, jennies, etc., entered for premiums.

The first class being for cattle, was represented quite liberally by Mr. Moses Wright, of Corvallis, who entered some very elegant short horn stock, including Major Anderson, a light roan three years old and upwards, weighing 1700 pounds; very pretty roan, weighing, perhaps, 1500 pounds; two handsome cows, Jessie Fremont and Beauty, besides a number of other head. Mr. Clark, of Marion County, and Mr. G. W. Hunt, of Sublimity, were also on the books for entrances of short horn Durham stock. Mr. Cross, of Salem, brought on to the grounds a band of a dozen head but they were not entered for premiums. The exhibit in this class shows that Oregon has an excellent start in the line of breeded cattle.

Class number two being for horses, was very full. It would seem almost incredible, the number of fine blooded horses that were entered in the various subdivisions of this class, which is so large that it will require much time to go through with the examinations. There are yearlings on the grounds which would pass for old horses of more than ordinary grade in point of strength, size and general appearance. The most noticeable among this class of entries, is that by Mr. Myers, of Ashland Mills, owner of Coburg and his family of colts. He has on exhibition 7 yearlings, one 2-year old, and Coburg himself, showing exactly the grade of the stock and its most prominent advantages. I am free to confess that he has the secret, and the means, of furnishing fine draft horses or roadsters, for challenging the world, and it is a great credit to the State of Oregon to know that in point of fact, from all available information on the subject, there is not another State in the Union that can compare successfully with this. Mr. Myers is not alone, however, the producer of a solid character of horses, in Oregon, for all work. There are on exhibition a number of colts that stand well in this scale, besides there being any amount entered without reference to blood, which are fine specimens of the useful animal. I propose taking a look through the stables and gaining an accurate description of all the horses on the ground before the closing of the Fair.

At four o'clock P. M. to-day, there was a trial of speed, for trotting stallions, of one mile. Mr. Tuffts entered Capt. J. C. Van Bergen's fine horse, Emigrant; Mr. Dennison entered Live Oak George, and Mr. Acker entered Fly by Night. There was but one opinion among the Judges in the examination. That was, Emigrant was decidedly the best horse, and they gave him two straight heats, in 2:53. Live Oak George was drawn, Fly went the two heats, running for the most part, but Emigrant did his work honestly, truly and pretty. He stands among the people of the State now, as decidedly the best horse in the State. He is not kept as a fast horse, but it is thought he can make better time than he made today; yet, for horse of all work, he is good.

Mr. D. B. Crawford took the first premium on matched carriage horses, driving Comet and Young Eclipse in harness. Mr. W. H. Wallace took the second premium, driving a matched pair of geldings. Mr. Colburn Barrel, and Messrs. Brigham & Welch, of Multnomah county, took first premiums on thorough-bred horses. Mr. Barrell had entered the somewhat famous "Millard Mare."

The display of jacks, jennies and mules would have been a credit to Lexington or Louisville. Mr. Charles Bacon, of Portland, had entered a French Castilian, lately imported, of dark color and medium size; Mr. A. M. Osborn, of Peoria, Linn county, and Mr. J. E. Osborn, of Corvallis, entered two quite large Maltese jacks; Mr. E. Stuart, of North Yamhill, entered a most excellent Castilian, of medium size, brought to this State by Mr. Hiram Smith, and Mr. S. Newsom entered an imported Spanish black, with mealy nose, which constitue the most important in this class. Mr. Smith was on the ground with a number of excellent animals, but as the Awarding Committee have not made a final decision regarding the merits of them, it would be hard for me to discriminate. The show was alike creditable to the exhibitors and the State.

Of the third class—sheep—twenty pens of American, Australian, Spanish and French Merino are noticed and attract more than usual attention. The principal exhibitors are Mr. T. G. Naylor, of Washington county; Mr. J. D. Patterson, of Alameda county, California; Mr. A. Luelling, of Washington county; Mr. J. Minto, Mr. T. L. Davidson, J. H. Roberts and R. C. Geer, of Marion county. Mr. Geer exhibits a number of splendid Southdown and Cotswold bucks, and Southdown ewes, and a few specimens of the New Oxfordshire and Hampshire-down varieties are shown by William Smith, of Linn county. The greatest variety by far are American and Australian crosses, between the Spanish and French Merino. Mr. Patterson's exhibit seems to attract great attention of the woolgrowers. His sheep are a cross between the full blood French and Spanish Merino, and are considered something extra for the State to improve of. He has one three years old, bearing a fleece of fine wool (the growth of its age,) to show that the sheep will carry a heavy fleece and be in good condition at the same time. It is estimated that the fleece of this animal will shear fifty-four pounds, and negotiations are pending to have the sheep disposed of at this time, which will give Marion county the benefit.

There is a good show in the fourth class—swine principally, but little poultry worth speaking of. Mr. Wm. A. Mills, of Washington county, has a pen of seven pigs, a cross between the Essex and Berkshire, and one pair of full blood Essex pigs. Mr. A. Snelling, of Lane County, shows a family of the same cross, and there are several pens not entered for premiums which are quite creditable stock. Mr. Cross, of this place, has a grade worthy of mention, but I was not able to obtain the particulars in regard to them from the contraband in charge of the pen, and am obliged to pass them by, but will say, from my own observation, I deem Mr. C. a practical hog raiser. This branch of products needs as much attention in Oregon as does the raising of sheep, at this time, and farmers can in no manner better devote the attention of a day at the Fair, than in the discussion of hog breeding. At this time the State is almost destitute of stock hogs. There is always a demand for good cured sides, hams and bacon, and the time and money spent in studying the various qualities of swine breeded, and conferring upon the subject, will be of some importance to breeders and raisers.

But few more entries were made in fifth class to-day, of plowing implements and machinery. Messrs. Knapp, Burrell & Co., and Robinson & Lake, of Portland, and Mr. S. A. Nickerson, of Linn County, who exhibits a reaper of his own invention and make, besides Mr. J. E. Storer, of Multnomah County, who enters a fanning mill for premiums, are about the only persons taking part in this class. A McCormick reaper, and another thresher, were placed upon exhibition to-day.

The annual election of officers resulted in the choice of Mr. John Douthitt, of Linn County, for President; Mr. J. C. Peebles, of Marion County, Corresponding Secretary, and Mr. John Barrows, of Linn County, Recording Secretary. The usual number of Vice Presidents were chosen; Mr. A. J. Dufur, of Multnomah County, was elected.

Third Day.

SALEM, Oct. 5th.

This has been a busy day with exhibitors, and considerable excitement and rivalry existed between those entering in the same class. It is estimated that not less than five thousand persons were on the Fair ground to-day. At one time the pavilion was crowded to suffocation, and the [illegible] of the different washing machines [illegible] out and for prizes. There were the rubbers, the scrubbers, the beaters, and last of all the [illegible] of all [illegible]. Each machine had its host of admirers, and some even went so far as to bet on their favorite. Hot water, soap and dirty clothes were [illegible], and the washers commenced. One of them, the simplest of the lot, called the [illegible], washed thirteen pieces in as many minutes, and in such a manner as to gain the good will of the judges. The churns were overhauled by the Committee, and a new fashioned one, something like a covered cradle, was not thought worthy of a premium, much to the disgust of the inventor, who is out in a card showing that the State Fair is a bill, because the judges could not see the beauties of his machine.

The rival sewing machines are doing a smashing business in the line of talking and sewing, the "lock stitch" is not worth a continental, it is preached by one, while another declares it to be "the thing." Grover & Baker's agent, has some splendid specimens of their machine work. An Opera cloak, embroidered white on blue silk, is examined well and often by the ladies, and I am of the opinion that some of the fair ones will shortly have the sewing machine fever.

In the art line we have splendid pictures in oil, crayon and worsted work. We have May flowers, stuffed birds, [illegible], specimens of binding, etc., etc., all creditable to the exhibitors. We have silver ware in abundance, surgical instruments that makes our blood run cold to think of them, and so many strange and unique things that it will take another letter or two to describe them.

While the Committees were engaged in examining and awarding their premiums to-day, the horse men were engaged in racing, and awarding premiums to the deserving nags. The following are the proceedings in this line:

At 10, A. M., trotting, sweepstakes, for horse, mare or gelding, single dash of five miles. Premium, $75 00. Captain Van Bergen entered Emigrant, S. B. Parrish, Honest George. The race was decided in favor of Honest George. Time, 17:40. There was some dissatisfaction exhibited towards this decision, as Honest George broke several times. It is the general opinion that Emigrant was, and should be the winning horse on account of his honesty and fairness.

Trial of speed for horse, mare or gelding, one mile dash. Premium, $50 00. Jack Mason, Clay pole, Moody's horse, Jasper's mare, and Hendershott's horse entered. Won by Jack Mason. Time, 1:53.

The horse Comet received the first prize for four years old and upward; Wanted the second.

For colts three years old and upwards, C. Barrel's colt Bronson by Paul Jones received the first premium.

For colts two years old and upwards, the first premium was awarded to T. G. Naylor's Water Joe colt; the second to S. E. Myers' black Coburg colt.

For yearling colts matched to harness, the first premium was awarded to S. E. Myer's Coburg colts Pon Hilton and Bell's Bluff; the second premium to his Coburg colts Hall and Lookout.

For the best walking horses, Mr. Downey's black gelding received the first premium. Time, one mile in 10 15.

For best racing, Mr. Gird's gray horse got the premium. Time, one mile in 5:13.

Premiums for horses, mare, or gelding, single dash of four miles, for $100, the following were entered: Portland, Basket mare, Lupor horse, and Butter Creek horse. Won easily by Portland. Time, 8:41. Basket mare second.

A Lady's Waterfall.

She wore a monstrous waterfall the night when first we met,
A roll half horse half human hair hung in a heap I [illegible]t
It rested on her shoulders for the first time put to use
And she looked just like a Digger squaw when lugging a papoose;
Or taking a good rearward squint at her mud hut together,
Just like a horse with tail tied up in very muddy weather
And she stooped beneath her burden she thought was passing fair
With her beauty head drawn backward, and her nose turned up in air,
I saw her but a moment, so graceful and so tall
Bending sweating 'neath the burden of her cherished waterfall

Oh, when will Fashion give us back the charms we prized so long
The web of silken splendor—the theme of many a song—
The shining hair that kissed the brow in many sunny [illegible]
And gave the crowning beauty to every lovely girl?
When will sense resume its rule again—Fashion receive a check,
And our loved ones no more carry round a pillow on the neck!
A thing composed of horses' tails, of wool, of jute, of cord
A monstrous mean disfigurement, by every man abhorred
A load upon their shoulders, at home, abroad, at ball
A foolish bag—a senseless lump they call a waterfall

The Martello Tower

My life is merely a little round—my tower, as I say, has only one story—but it may be new to many. It is not every body who is a coast guardsman In the winter I live on land like other people, except that I must keep the night watches but in Summer time I spend whole weeks in the Martello. It looks out straight upon the Atlantic, and is built upon a rock two miles from shore. The sea leaves twice that distance bare at Spring-tide, and falls forty feet, but at mid and low tide my comrade and myself can wade or walk to land, if we desire it A cart comes out to us from the station at those times, three times a week; otherwise we are quite islanded and out off from the world. We have no boat, for there is no room for one upon the platform where the great sixty-four lies, and were there one outside the sea would dash her to pieces like a nutshell. This very gun with its huge carriage I have known to be twisted round, muzzle inwards, by the wave and wind, I thought that that September night would have seen the last of the old tower, but it stood like the rock that is beneath it. The walls are very thick and strong, as may be seen by the depth of the embrasure that gives us light, but our upper room, in that tempest, seemed to rock like a tree It was on this very spot, in 1760, that a French army landed in their famous "flat bottomed boats," and the tower and its sixty-four are here to prevent a repetition of that visit. Its only present use is to harbor us coast-guardsmen, for the smugglers do not land much oftener than the French. I, for my part, laugh at them altogether as an extinct race; but Jack Jervis—the other Martello [illegible] is of a different opinion They caught him twenty years ago, when he was keeping guard alone in Pilan Bay, buried him up to his neck in the sand, and then bowled stones at his head.

Jack is the Nestor of the coast-guard, and numbers three times as many years as I. He has the most weather beaten figure-head one ever saw, but under his wrinkled forehead and white shaggy eyebrows, his black eyes peer with the vivacity of seventeen. He has seen strange things. When quite a little boy, he used to help his father at a very dangerous trade indeed; again and again in the days of the great French republic, he sailed over to the low far coast to eastward with Pitt's forged assignats. The Duc de Berri and other noble French exiles dwelt hereabout at that time, and once he took a cargo of them over, who were seized on landing, and never more heard of from that moment, either from friend or foe. When peace was proclaimed, Jack Jervis took up with the oyster fishery, with sons of his own. The line yonder, which French and English fishermen are bound to keep their own side of, is not so distinctly drawn upon the broad blue sea as it is in the treaty; and mistakes will happen sometimes, in the best regulated vessels. Although both nations have their small armed cruisers to protect their respective rights, it must needs occur, I say, that a little oyster-poaching—or, not to use a harsh word, scalloping—now and then takes place. If the transgressors are caught, however, both their boat and their cargo are confiscated to the aggrieved power; and this misfortune happened to Mr. John Jervis. He and his sons were made prisoners by the French cutter, and the nose of their craft turned more in the direction of Granville than they had calculated upon. I suppose their [illegible] were not very numerous, or kept too careless a watch; for certain it is, that after a while the course of both vessels was reversed, and they appeared in our little harbor five miles west of the Martello with the French crew prisoners under hatches. This achievement almost made poor Jervis historical, by provoking a war with France; but it ruined his oyster trade completely, and drove him into the coast-guard.

When the sun is sinking in the wavy west, and the sea begins to crawl in between our tower and the land, is a famous time to listen to the old man's stories: the cry of a solitary sea-bird, and the water lapping on the stone, are all that then interrupts the silence, unless there be wind; and if there be, our well-accustomed ears but little regard it. The embrasure is not much adapted for a view; so, if it be warm enough, we sit out on the stone platform beside the sixty-four, with our pipes, and look out upon the level sea. I think I have seen it almost of every color; purple and even pitch black before a storm; pale, as if with malice, when the first light wind begins to stir it above the sunken rocks; snow-white in wrath, with the foam flying from its million angry lips; blue as heaven, green as earth, under the noon day beams; deep crimson, while the setting sun blis[illegible] over it; crossed by the silvery pathway of the Autumn moon; or, fairest of all its aspects, spread in dark night from end to end with a bright silver net of its own weaving—the phosphorescent gleaming of the sea. Making our business upon the deep waters, we see many beautiful and wondrous sights, and some very sad ones.

It was a July afternoon, and we were watching a large [illegible] of villagers employed in gathering "vraic"—a sea-weed very valuable both as fuel and [illegible] upon the rich sea-bed far away, it was low tide. There were eighteen altogether, as we could very well make out with our telescope, and several of them women. They had a good sized fishing smack with them, which was moored in a little cove until the tide should come; and having filled it with "vraic" enough, the people were [illegible] for they had a fiddler with them—and [illegible]. Pr[illegible]tly they all got into the [illegible], when the tide came up and they set sail. Instead, however, of moving onward, we saw their little craft sink gradually as far as the shallow [illegible] of the water would permit her. The sail, as we conjectured, had been hoisted too soon, and taken by the wind before she cleared the rock, which had knocked a hole in her side. The poor creatures were left standing on the deck which was half above water, but the tide was coming in apace; it was impossible they could reach land on foot, as they all very well know, because of the quicksands and arms of the sea that had already cut them off from it, and even from the Martello; they knew that no boats could go out to them until the sea would be many feet above their heads; yet they made piteous signs. There was one little boat with them which held four men, and we saw that row away at topmost speed to a vessel some miles off. They had wisely placed their strongest men in that, as their only chance of getting help; but a breeze sprung up and we saw the vessel sail away without regarding them, then the boat pulled in a long way round, but yet the nearest way to land. Alas! as we were well aware, all other boats were in the cove to the westward, out of which nothing can get until long after mid-tide. Some boys were playing on the sand there, with a number of poor folk looking on, and we saw the four men arrive among them, having landed and ran around the point. Even at that great distance we could mark the effect of the sad news, not a person of all that holiday party but had some friend or relative in those fourteen left upon the sunken ship They ran down to their fishing smacks, and strove to move them over the rocks, and sand, piteously helpless, they stood impatient beside the motionless hulls for hours that seemed days In the meantime the waters were closing over the doomed vessel yonder, and only her masts, to which a confused mass was clinging, were left visible the wind, too, was beginning to blow very hard To sail out among the rocks was becoming a very dangerous work indeed; but the moment the tide admitted of it, we saw a fishing smack put off it was one belonging to the two sons of John Jervis—and I saw a look of pride pass over his face notwithstanding their peril Both were brave lads and skillful pilots. They threaded the breakers safely, and came as near as they dared to the unhappy craft. To have approached more closely would have been to share her fate One woman and one man were still above water when they arrived, but the woman dropped into the grave before their eyes. They threw the man a rope and he even managed to catch it in his teeth, and held it for a little while, but the poor creature's arms were so benumbed with cold, and his hands so strained with grasping, that he could unclasp neither from the mast. He told them it was all in vain, and thanked them; he bade them take care of themselves and get to shore while the wind yet permitted them, and ere the dark set in And they were forced to leave him there, in the night, amidst the roaring breakers, now whelmed by the sea, and now swept by the bitter wind We saw the people crowding to the beach on their return, who could not be made to believe, although they saw but the two young men on deck, that others were not below

I could well tell you other sad sights we have seen from our Martello of a great merchant vessel going to pieces within a mile of us at night with its distress guns flashing momently, and the cries of the unfortunates mingling with the pitiless blast, of horrible forms which came suddenly up, like porpoises, for weeks after, which were all dead corpses! But I forbear We live, for the most part, among very pleasant sights and sounds; fishermen are singing round us at their healthy toil from morn to eve, in single smacks, or tossed with quite a fleet of others, great vessels homeward and outward bound, pass in the distance, leaving a long black line behind them in the sky, and a white track in the sea, bands of little children play or gather shells upon the beach, not seldom there is a review upon the sands of scarlet coated militia from the town and in the summer evenings barelegged lads and lasses pass the tower with their shrimping nets. Sometimes we join these last, each with a large basket swung behind us, but within reach of our hand, and provided with a charming invention between a butterfly net and a Turkish flag, which is a prawn catcher It is low water, and the whole four miles of rock is visible What wondrous gardens do the mermaids keep! What beautiful broad leaves have their brown trees! what flowering shrubs surmount the smallest hillocks! what exquisite and graceful plants hang in festoons around their enormous rockeries! how charmingly those rainbow colored roses open and spread themselves in the clear salt water pools, and of what beautiful shapes and hues are the stones and shells that pave them! Indeed, for a man with the disease that manifests itself outwardly in vivariums and aquariums, I don't know any better place to live in than our Martello Tower. If you only slip at every other step—the delicate shapes of leaf and stem beneath are covered as it seems with blood, and you think you have done yourself a frightful injury, whereas you have only squashed a sea anemone, which is one of a great family of liquid paints

Each takes his own line round the rocks, now up to his knees in water, and now waist deep pushing his net well under the tangled weed, and taking care to keep it close to the bottom. Then in "bottle" or "neck" of it, he will soon find some of those huge transparent ghosts with goggle eyes and grisly fingers, which turn pink after boiling, and are called prawns. It seems a strange proceeding this exploring the bed of the sea, and clambering over the hills that lie for ever fathoms beneath it, except, perhaps, for a couple of hours in the few days of Spring tide We wander from island to island, across tracts of green weed, or swift little runlets, or table lands of sand, and on looking around us on a sudden, do not recognize our position in the least, the great tracts of rock have utterly changed their shapes, and the lesser ones have entirely disappeared; the sands are vanishing rapidly, and we hear the moan to seaward of the advancing tide. One or two tidal "situations" which we have read in the Antiquary Redgauntlet and elsewhere—for we read in the Martello—begin to sit across us unpleasantly, we are glad to recognize our standard, which is a spare prawn net floating from its natural keep and so to recall our bearings. Tired, but well pleased, we wade home with our well filled baskets and enjoy their contents at tea most thoroughly There is no place for an appetite so good as our Martello Tower. Finally we are lulled to rest like infants, by the murmur of the deep, and dream, it may be, of some one of the bare legged lasses under the form of a mermaid with a splendid property in freehold under the sea.

There is a steady consumptive demand in the retail market but little interrupted The retail dealers feel that the farmer has been a great benefit [illegible] in fact, and is taking much of their trade in this city

There is an abundance of elegant fruit in the market and choice qualities of vegetables are in plentiful The finest tomatoes, taking the entire lot, that we have seen in the city, are now on sale from the farm of Clinton Kelly, east of Portland

The demand for butter is steady and increasing. By the middle or last of the month it is thought it will be quite active

Notwithstanding game abounds in swarms on the rivers and streams adjacent to the city, there is but little offering. Trout are more freely offered Brook selling at $3 ⅌ doz Cowlitz river at $1 50

The only change observable is a slight advance in bacon

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.
